Hi,
My parents who live in the UK are thinking of coming out to stay for an extended period of time and looking for somewhere to stay near us the month of January. If you know of anyone that is looking to house swap (they have a lovely little cottage in London, UK) or has a nice comfortable but affordable place to rent near the Highland Park area please drop me a line. Here is their request below! Thanks
Two seniors from London England visiting our daughter and family in Highland Park are looking to exchange/house sit or rent a small apartment/house locally for 3-4 weeks in January.
We have a small two bedroom arts and crafts cottage in North West London with easy access to the centre of town.

Another Car Accident at the Same Spot.

By Mirna Alfonso/Editor (mirna.alfonso@patch.com) (Patch Staff)
□ Updated September 20, 2014 at 9:45 pm □ 1 □

Willie M. Abrasaldo says:

This time it's a BMW 650i that plowed head-on into a parked pick up truck at the corner of Monte Vista Street and Marmion Way. Due to the force of the impact, not only did it damage the pick-up truck but also the car parked behind it was heavily damaged. Seconds after the accident, the driver and the occupants of the BMW (about 4 or 5 of them), fled the scene.

We are asking for your help to talk and convince Councilman Jose Huizar to do something about this perennial accident zone. This spot averages 2 accidents a year or one every 6 months. The Stop Signs are helping a little but have not stopped the accidents. We need speed bumps on both directions of the road and a big bold sign stating ignore the speed bumps at your peril.

8 Eagle Rock residents feel dumped on by proposed landfill expansion

A hauling truck heads up Scholl Canyon Road to landfill. The route is located next to homes in the 7600 block of Figueroa Street.

By AMANDA SCHALLERT

EAGLE ROCK — Seeking a quiet place to live where they could send their kids to neighborhood schools, Ryan and Allison Turner moved from Echo Park this February to a dead-end street with only a few suburban-style homes located a short walk from the landmark Eagle Rock. The 7600 block of N. Figueroa Street, however, is not always that quiet, the Turners discovered.

On a regular basis, dump and hauling trucks that pull off the nearby 134 Freeway on their way to the Scholl Canyon Landfill in neighboring Glendale make a wrong turn and rumble up on the Turner's street. Ryan Turner said he sees about six hauling trucks go by a day if he's not at work.

The Turners and their neighbors on Figueroa Street are among the Eagle Rock residents who stand to face the biggest impact from plans by the City of Glendale to expand the 535-acre dump and keep it open beyond 2021, when the landfill is expected to reach capacity and close. Despite protests, Glendale officials are continuing to push a plan to increase the landfill's height by more than 10% and keeping it open for another 13 to 19 years, according to L.A. Now.

Though the Turners are happy with their home, they said they may have considered moving to a different place if they had known that the landfill might stay open years longer than expected.

"The public counts on (officials) to keep the agreement," said Allison Turner of the existing plan to close the dump in 2021. "What's the point if you don't keep the agreement? Plus, we have kids and I worry about their future."

Local leaders, including Los Angeles City Councilman Jose Huizar, have voiced opposition to the landfill's expansion, saying that the frequency of garbage trucks whizzing by has damaged neighborhood streets. Eagle Rock Neighborhood Council President David Greene has also claimed that Glendale city officials are simply trying to get more money from the landfill.

Down the street from the Turners, five-year Eagle Rock resident Doria said she thinks "too many" trucks go by her home and stop by briefly on her street each day. To her, the hauling trucks are one of the few imperfections of the street.

"It's a great area," she said. "But when the trucks come, they ruin it."
